Levin & Perconti Files a Personal Injury Lawsuit for Injuries Sustained in an Automobile Accident in Des Plaines, Illinois

Chicago, IL – Levin & Perconti has filed a personal injury lawsuit on behalf of Melinda Tomzik against a Chicago-area driver for the personal injuries she sustained in an automobile accident. The suit was filed on July 9, 2008.

Ms. Tomzik, a nurse, stopped her vehicle at a red light on southbound Bender Street in Des Plaines, Illinois on the way home from work. The defendant, Mr. Kim, ran in to the back of her car. Ms. Tomzik sustained bodily injuries and whiplash to her neck when she was thrown around at impact. The accident has caused her continued pain and suffering and has required her to seek continued medical treatment for her injuries. Ms. Tomzik continues to have a decrease in the use of her neck, pain, and must still receive physical therapy to improve her healing.

Jeffrey Martin, a partner at Levin & Perconti, filed the case. According to Martin, “a case like this shows how inattentive drivers lead to more than just fender benders, they lead to actual head and neck injuries. Melinda’s injuries were so easily avoidable had the other driver simply paid attention as he approached her car at the intersection.”
